

Roald Dahl

Offwell School celebrated the centenary of Roald Dahl's birth by dipping into three of his books. Charlie and the Chocolate Factory provided the inspiration for exotic handmade chocolates and golden tickets; The Twits allowed the children to come up with truly horrible ideas for what might be stuck in Mr Twit's beard and The BFG gave a focus on dreams and wishes. They all had a lot of fun and will no doubt remember the iconic author for many years to come.

Beech Class Welly Walk

Taking education outside is a wonderful, and frequent, inspirational opportunity at Offwell School to bring learning alive and allow children to let their imaginations free. Beech Class, ages 7 to 9, are looking at 'A River' by Marc Martin which follows the journey of a river through towns, mountains, jungles and many other places. The children followed their wellies and told the story of where they went; "The path leads down a stony hill. I hear many wellies walking on stones. The edge of the woods is drawing near, the smell is sweet and the grass is soft." Rosie aged 7.
